

Contents

Foreword	vii
Edward A. Silver, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan

Acknowledgments	xi
------------------------------	----

SECTION 1

Introduction

1: Introduction to the Project, the People, and the Reflective Activities	3
Beth Herbel-Eisenmann, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan
2: Some Essential Ideas about Classroom Discourse	29
Beth Herbel-Eisenmann, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan

SECTION 2

A Journey of Awareness and Change

3: “Math Is about Thinking”: From Increased Participation to Conceptual Talk	45
Patricia A. Gronewold, Hiatt Middle School, Des Moines, Iowa
4: Reading (Articles), Writing (Reflections), and A-Risk-Metic: Working to Improve My Practice	57
Darin Dowling, McCombs Middle School, Des Moines, Iowa
5: Talking around Graphing Calculators: A Journey through Performance Gaps	71
Lana Lyddon Hatten, Central Academy, Des Moines, Iowa
Thoughts to Remember	91
Section 2 Response
Courtney Cazden, Harvard Graduate School of Education, Cambridge, Massachusetts

SECTION 3

Tensions, Dilemmas, and Questions in the Process of Changing Discourse Practices

6: Students’ Ownership and Relinquishing Control	99
Jeff Marks, Roosevelt High School, Des Moines, Iowa

7: Revoicing: The Good, the Bad, and the Questions 117
Jean Krusi, Ames Middle School, Ames, Iowa

Opening Up the Public Speech Channel 137
Section 3 Response
David Pimm, University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta

SECTION 4

Images of Productive Discourse Practices

8: “It,” “That,” and “What”? Vagueness and the Development of Mathematical Vocabulary 147
Tammie Cass, Nodaway Valley Middle School, Fontanelle, Iowa

9: Maintaining Mathematical Momentum through “Talk Moves” 165
Angie Shindelar, Nodaway Valley Middle School, Fontanelle, Iowa

Reflecting on and Adjusting One’s Own Talk 179
Section 4 Response
Catherine O’Connor, Boston University, Boston, Massachusetts

SECTION 5

Selective Listening: Ignoring and Hearing Students’ Voices

10: Listening to My Students’ Thoughts on Mathematics Education 187
Joseph Obrycki, Valley High School, West Des Moines, Iowa

SECTION 6

Conclusions

11: Synthesizing the Bases of Purposeful Discourse: Reading, Reflecting, and Community 205
Beth Herbel-Eisenmann, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan
Michelle Cirillo, Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa
Samuel Otten, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan

12: An Argument for Taking Up Similar Work 219
Beth Herbel-Eisenmann, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan
Michelle Cirillo, Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa
Lorraine Males, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan