

Contents

Acknowledgments v

Forewordvii
Robert Q. Berry III

Chapter 1 Introduction..... 1
Jennifer M. Langer-Osuna, Stanford University
Niral Shah, University of Washington

Chapter 2 “Bossy,” “Boy,” and “Urban”: Troubling Coded Language in Mathematics Education Research 13
Niral Shah, University of Washington
Missy D. Cosby, Michigan State University
Imani Masters Goffney, University of Maryland
Crystal Kalinec-Craig, University of Texas, San Antonio
Marcy B. Wood, University of Arizona
Victoria Hand, University of Colorado, Boulder
Sandra Crespo, Michigan State University

Chapter 3 Institution-Identities in the Neoliberal Era: Challenging Differential Opportunities for Mathematics Learning 33
Emma C. Gargroetzi, University of Texas at Austin
Ilana S. Horn, Vanderbilt University
Rosa D. Chavez, Stanford University
Sunghwan Byun, Michigan State University

Chapter 4 (Re)Imagining Mathematical Identities: Toward Political Clarity in Knowledge Generated
About Racially Minoritized Youth..... 59
Maxine McKinney de Royston, University of Wisconsin, Madison
Tesha Sengupta-Irving, University of California, Berkeley
Missy D. Cosby, Michigan State University

Chapter 5 Ethics and Identity Research in the Field of Mathematics Education: Reflections 83
Sandra Crespo, Michigan State University
Emma Gargroetzi, University of Texas at Austin
Victoria Hand, University of Colorado, Boulder
Beth Herbel-Eisenmann, Michigan State University

Commentary 1 Tracing the Path of Identity Research in Mathematics Education: The Journey and the Future 109
Jo Boaler and Tanya LaMar, Stanford University

Commentary 2 Looking Back and Looking Forward: A Reflection on Research on Mathematics Learning and Identity..... 117
Na’ilah Suad Nasir, Spencer Foundation

Commentary 3 Refusing Capital Accumulation and Commodification: A Brief Commentary on Mathematics Identity Research..... 123
Danny Bernard Martin, University of Illinois at Chicago