

Mayan Go Fish

This game is played with number cards.

Directions

- Play the game as a regular game of Go Fish. Players try to acquire pairs of cards with the same value expressed in different ways.
- Play the game in groups of three to four people.
- Shuffle the cards and deal each player seven cards. Place the remaining cards facedown on the table to serve as the “fish pond.”
- When it is a player’s turn, the player asks a specific person in the group, “[Person’s name], do you have a card with a value of $[x]$?”
- If the player who was asked has a card of that value, he or she hands over the card. The person asking then lays down the pair of cards and proceeds to ask someone in the group for a card of another value.
- The player continues asking for cards of a specific value until someone does not have a card of the desired value. The response of “Go Fish” is then given, and the asker draws one card from the fish pond.
- If the player draws a card of the desired value from the fish pond, the player must keep the card until his or her next turn.
- Pairs of cards can only be laid down at the start of a player’s turn.

Notes

- Play the game cooperatively as a small group the first time you play. After everyone is comfortable with the game, play the game in a more competitive way.
- Place a limit on the playing time, such as fifteen minutes.
- Use the chart to the right to determine winners.
