 00:46:19 Lora Deiter: It depends on how you roll. If you have a 3, but roll a 1, 2, 5, or 6, it's no problem.
 00:46:20 beth blumberg: lower
 00:46:20 Candice Smith: lower

 00:46:27 Michelle Barrera: lower
 00:46:34 Pooja Balani: lower
 00:46:39 Sulafah Ansya Saskiyah: lower
 00:46:39 Bill Furman: when its a 6 or 1 you have a 50% chance of being right. when its a 3 you always get it right if you play correctly
 00:46:59 Bill Furman: 3 and 4
 00:47:02 Barbara Harvey: Really?
 00:47:06 beth blumberg: If the number is 3 you should guess it correction
 every time
 00:47:14 beth blumberg: same for 4
 00:47:16 Bill Furman: yes!
 00:47:17 Lisa Ashe: makes sense
 00:47:19 Christine Tabor: Because 3 will have the higher odds
 00:48:04 Elizabeth Sasse: In playing for a car on the actual show, some knowledge about the prize will also come in to play.
 00:48:10 Christine Tabor: But there was a 6 and a 1

00:48:33 Nick DiGrispino: lower than $i/3$ and yet people still play the lottery

00:48:41 Chris Watts: Is there any science/data behind the $1/3$ to $1/2$ optimum winnability rate?

00:48:58 Muhammad Ghiyats Ristiana: so confused here hahaha

00:49:09 Jason Allen: An issue is that you assume the player will play perfectly. People are frequently dumb and go by feelings.

00:49:26 Jamie Cook: this is all theoretical probability

00:49:27 Bill Furman: @Jason if people play dumb their odds are worse

00:49:28 Mark Phipps: Sounds like playing blackjack

00:49:33 Faith Peddie: Stacy, in case you didn't see my first message. Please email me at fpeddie@nctm.org and we will arrange for a prize to be sent your way!

00:49:34 Sendhil Revuluri: But then you need to make the yodeling correction – that game is just awesome

00:49:38 Elizabeth Sasse: Don't these probabilities assume that the player will "go with the odds" on each roll?

00:49:55 Bill Furman: if they go against odds their probability is worse in general

00:51:10 Elizabeth Sasse: A lot of the cars on TPIR have prices that end in 4 or 9

00:51:38 Larry Arnett: so they are less than 15000 and 20000

00:51:44 Warren Ledbetter: Also, humans tend to unconsciously play odds in certain patterns.

00:52:30 Dave Hankin: In other words.....rigged.

00:52:31 Shiv Gaur: Thanks!

00:52:59 Elizabeth Ruiz: Ken Jennings
